Drys Greatly Pleased By Official County Results; Prohibition Loses in Ohio

Official Dry Majority In County 1290--Official Dry Majority in City 28--Expect 40,000 Majority Against Prohibition in Ohio--Two Acts Defeated.

Local drys are decidedly pleased with the result of Tuesday's election, one of the most pleasing features from their point of view being the fact that the Prohibition amendment carried in the city by an official majority of 28 votes. The dry majority in the county is 1290. In the eleven precincts of the city there were 1294 votes for the proposed amendment and 1266 against it, according to the official count completed by the board of elections Wednesday. In 1914 the dry vote cast in the county was 3920 which shows that the drys made a gain of exactly 272 votes. The dry majority in 1914 was 543.

Gain In State.

Latest reports from Columbus indicate that Prohibition lost by about 40,000 votes as compared with a wet majority of 84,000 in 1914. It is practically established that all of the proposed amendments were defeated by safe majorities as were the administration measures, the McDermott act decentralizing the liquor licensing system, and the Sprague act changing the congressional districts of the state so as to increase the Republican representation at Washington.

Official Totals.

Following are the official totals of the county board of elections Wednesday afternoon:

Prohibition.
Yes—4,192
No—2,902
Majority for Prohibition, 1290.

Bond Exemption.
Yes—2,419
No—3,225
Majority against Exemption of bonds from taxation, 1196.

Term Extension.
Yes—1,755
No—3,151
Majority against extending terms of county officials to four years, 1396.

Constitutional Stability.
Yes—2,280
No—4,081
Majority against Building I. & R., 1,801.

Sprague Act.
Yes—1,572
No—2,125
Majority against new congressional districting, 553.

McDermott Act.
Yes—1,572
No—2,200
Majority against liquor license decentralizer, 628.

Court Orders Sale Of The Mizer Sanitorium Company

By an order of common pleas court handed down Wednesday in the case of French V. Mizer vs. The Mizer Sanitorium Co., Dr. H. R. McCurdy, receiver, will proceed to sell the sanitorium as a going concern, collect all claims due or owing, and, after paying the costs of the suit and all valid claims, distribute the balance among the persons in the corporation according to their separate interests as determined by the court in accordance with the records of the corporation and the agreement among them before the dissensions arose between French V. Mizer and his brother, Blake V. Mizer.

The court finds that the disagreements of such a grave nature that if the majority was permitted to manage and control the corporation, the majority stockholders would coordinate the interest of the plaintiff.

The finding is that the aggregate interest as between the parties that French Mizer should have is 50 shares, Audrey 10 shares, Helen 50 shares, and Blake 50 shares. It is also found that they should receive the following amounts: French $125 per month; Helen $50 per month; Audrey $40 per month; Blake $125 per month.

Porter Rules on Eight Hour Day Question

When asked by the local election board for a ruling on the request of the election officials in Ward 1, Precinct B, for compensation at the rate of $3 per eight hours and at the eight hour day law which applies to public work, Prosecutor Dan Porter gave it as his opinion that the law did not apply in these case and quoted from the statutes to prove the compensation for electing officials. The law does fix the same definitely for the work at $3 per day for clerks and judges and $2 in addition to the presiding judge for the duties other than actual polling votes.

TAKES NEW POSITION.

Walter Simmons, formerly employed in the Three-Mile house, left last evening for Columbus where he will take a position in the office of Superintendent Murphy of the Pennsylvania railroad company.

TO LEAVE BEDFORD.

Burt Shaffer held a public sale of his effects at his home in West Bedford Wednesday. He expects to move to Detroit in the near future.

Drys Ready to Renew Fight

Columbus, O., Nov. 3.—"We boys are already thinking of next year," said Wayne B. Wheeler, of the Anti-Saloon League, Wednesday morning, discussing the results of the state and city elections of Tuesday.

The dry publicity committee will meet in a few days to take up the matter of a campaign for next year. It is proposed to hold a series of conferences of the dry forces of the state. It is proposed to hold a meeting of the officers of the Anti-Saloon League in Columbus in the near future to discuss the matter.

Mr. Wheeler was very pleased with the result of the election Tuesday. He said the drys had made a splendid showing and had carried a majority of the cities of the state. The dry forces had carried Toledo, Akron, Springfield, Zanesville, Newark, Marion, Lima, Ashtabula, Bellaire, Steubenville, Portsmouth, Ironton, Lorain, Fremont, Sandusky, Ashland, Massillon, Canton, Alliance, Youngstown, Niles, Warren, Ravenna, Kent, Salem, East Liverpool, Martins Ferry, Barnesville, Cambridge, Cadiz, Dover, New Philadelphia, Uhrichsville, Coshocton, Nelsonville, Athens, Chillicothe, Circleville, Ironton, Jackson, Gallipolis, Marietta, Lancaster, Logan, Athens, Hillsboro, Wilmington, Xenia, Springfield, Troy, Piqua, Urbana, Bellefontaine, Delaware, Marion, Upper Sandusky, Fremont, Tiffin, Bucyrus, Galion, Mansfield, Ashland, Wooster, Orrville, Massillon, Canton, Alliance, Salem, Steubenville, Bellaire, Cambridge, Zanesville, Newark, Chillicothe, Portsmouth, Ironton, Lima, Ashtabula, Sandusky, Lorain, Bucyrus, Galion, Tiffin, Fremont

SOBER CHAUFFEURS NEEDED.

Safety First Demands Mental, Moral and Physical Examinations.

As a result of the first annual convention of the Safety First Federation of America in Detroit, efforts will be made to have many suggestions and plans adopted by the convention adopted throughout the United States.

The most important of these suggestions provide for legislation requiring mental, moral and physical examination of motor vehicle operators; non issue of firearms except upon police certificates, free distribution of tetanus serum by the state, enactment of laws prohibiting the sale of poison, exile of the toilet towel and public drinking cup, public lectures controlled by the municipality, daily inspection of school children, prevention of promiscuous expectoration in public places, transparent illumination of auto license plates, legislation against railroad trespassers, and many others.

Though Different, Still the Same

By F. A. MITCHEL

Dr. T. Howard Pulsifer—he parted his name, as well as his hair, in the middle because he was the family physician of the multimillionaires and must do as they did—had just opened a letter containing a $1,000 check for an operation he had performed, when, looking up, or rather down, he espied a small, ragged boy with a pale, hungry face gazing wistfully at him.

"How did you get in here, sonny?" asked the doctor.

"Dodged in when de crowd was goin' out. De doorkeeper didn't see me."

It was the end of the doctor's office hours.

"Well, what can I do for you?" asked the doctor.

"Me mudder is sick."

"Where does your mother live?"

"In a tenement on Jimson street."

The doctor was putting away his $1,000 check when the small boy spoke again:

"She tole me to tell yer she hain't nothin' to pay with. She can't do no washin', and she can't git no pay. She'll pay when she gits to work ag'in."

The doctor looked from his fat pocketbook to the lean boy, but said nothing. The boy was turning to go when the doctor stopped him.

"Stay here till I get a bite of lunch."

With that he left the room. The boy gaped about him at the paraphernalia intended for looking at persons' insides, chopping off diseased parts, etc. Among other things was a glass case containing articles which the child could better understand. There were large pieces of silver, among which he recognized a pitcher. Another was a cup with three handles. There were also a cane with a gold handle, an urn—all gold—and many enormous jewels. While the boy was gaping at them the door opened and the doctor returned.

"What's them?" asked the boy, referring to the glittering contents of the case.

"They? They're presents from grateful patients I have helped or who have believed I have helped them, which is the same. Now we will go and see your mother."

He took the boy out to his limousine, put him in, got in himself, told the chauffeur where to go and was whirled away. When he reached the sickroom a woman lying on a bed looked at him in surprise.

"Why, Jakey!" she exclaimed. "Who have you brought? I told you to go to Dr. Puffer."

"Won't I do as well?" asked the great surgeon.

"Yes, sir, but Dr. Puffer makes it a business of tendin' us poor folks. He only charges 50 cents when he comes, though he makes us pay, and if we don't he makes us sweat."

"You can have as long as you like to pay me, and if you never pay I shall not feel it. Now tell me your symptoms."

Six months later the same boy appeared at Dr. Pulsifer's office. The doctor, not recognizing him, asked him how he got in. The boy replied that he had sneaked in.

"That's frank," said the doctor. "What do you want?"

"Me mudder is well."

"Oh, your mother is well?"

"Yes, sir; she's workin' ag'in."

"Who is your mother?"

The dialogue was interrupted by the entrance of a fashionably dressed man.

"Perhaps you don't remember me, doctor," said the visitor. "I'm Alfred Charmley. You treated my wife some time ago."

"Oh! Charmley! I recollect. How is Mrs. Charmley?"

A pained expression came upon the visitor's face. His wife had died under the doctor's care. The latter saw his mistake, remembered too late, and the pained expression was reflected in his own face.

"I've called to settle your bill," said the man.

"There is no bill to settle," said the doctor.

But the man insisted and left a check for $1,500. The doctor, after his visitor had gone, sat oblivious to his surroundings. He was recalled to himself by the small boy.

"Yer don't remember me mudder, do you?" said the child. "You went with me to see me mudder when I sneaked in before, and you cured her."

"Yes, I remember you now."

"Me mudder sent me to give you de pay." He poked a silver half dollar at the great man. "And I tole her about what yer got from de grateful patients. She sent this to go in de case. It's me father's watch. He's dead. She used at pawn wid it."

The watch was of silver and worth probably when new $5 or $6. The doctor took the offered article with inexpressible sadness.

"I did you a favor when I went to see your mother," he said. "Now I wish you to do me one. What's your name?"

"Jake Connoly."

Taking up a pen, the doctor indorsed the check he had just received to Jacob Connoly and handed it to the boy, telling him to give it to his mother. The boy went away, and the doctor sat mute. There was a faraway look in his eye. He was thinking of the patient who had died while under his care and whose death in the multiplicity of his cases he had forgotten, and he said to himself:

"What's the difference between the upper and the lower strata of life? Poverty makes the poor a horror to their betters, and success makes the successful a bore to themselves."

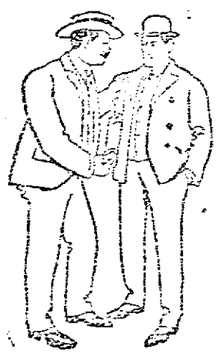
Nasty, Sour, Disgusting Taste Every Morning?



You get up with a mean, disagreeable feeling—an offensive breath—a tongue with a coating, bilious coating—right away you know why. Why don't you wake up to the fact that you ought to do something. Your stomach needs attention—your bowels need cleansing—your liver needs stirring up.

YOU NEED PEPSINCO

and you need it bad. Pepsinco will fix your stomach, liver and bowels in a thorough, systematic manner. It's made for that purpose, and thousands will vouch for it. Pepsinco worms through the stomach. It digests what is eaten. Take Pepsinco for a few days. A dandy bitter taste? Yes, it's. A chalky texture? No indeed. It will make up in the morning clean, with a sweet smelling, wholesome breath, a pleasing appetite and a good healthy appetite. Norris Pharmacal Company, Wapakoneta, Ohio.

VICTORY IN DEFEAT

Another "victory" such as Tuesday brought to the liquor interests of this state will prove their undoing. Another "defeat" like that the temperance people sustained and the dreams of Mother Stewart and Francis Willard and that host of noble women who headed the Crusades of a generation and more ago will at last be realized.

It was just such defeats as this that Lowell, the great American poet, had in mind when he wrote:

Truth forever on the scaffold, wrong forever on the throne;
Yet that scaffold sways the future and behind the dim Unknown,
Standeth God within the shadow, keeping watch above his own.

It is better to think about the victories that are to come than to pine over the defeats of the moment. It is better to gaze into the past and follow the progress the temperance movement has made year by year than to deplore the loss of one battle.

The progress of real reforms is not measured by single battles like that of Tuesday. No man who has in mind only the present can ever hope to get anywhere. Only this week 500,000 men, approximately half the voters in the state, went to the polls soberly and deliberately and voted for "PROHIBITION."

Twenty-five years ago not 20,000 men in the state dared speak the word Prohibition above a whisper. Less than ten years ago no a county in Ohio had ever dared think of attempting to vote against the open saloon. A decade ago the saloons in practically every city in the state ran practically the whole night through and Sunday selling was the accepted order.

Yes, dreams do come true. The dreams of Mother Stewart and those patriotic women who dared, single-handed and alone what the men of the state shrank from trying forty years ago are on the verge of fulfillment. They dreamed of the day when there should be no sale and no manufacture for sale of beverage intoxicants throughout the length and breadth of the United States.

And the iron in their souls has descended into the blood of their sons and daughters and the uneven fight they dared start nearly half a century ago is soon to be crowned with a victory that is already in sight. No one today is afraid to march under the banner of PROHIBITION. No one today is daunted by the financial and political power of the liquor traffic.

Even though the vote of Tuesday postponed the day of final reckoning, that vote will be hailed in every quarter of the Union as a moral victory for the temperance forces. In the prize ring it has ever been the man who could stand punishment without flinching, rather than the adroit boxer and shifty tactician, whom the world has accorded the title of fighter.

The dry forces of Ohio are now certainly worthy the title of fighters. Twice within the year they have accepted defeat and they are gamer for the final set-to today than they have ever been before. It is for this reason that several states are sure to go dry in 1916. At least four will vote on state-wide prohibition and the result here in Ohio will add thousands of voters to the dry column in each of these four.

So much for the moral force of a good example. A righteous cause never loses. The history of Coshocton county will eventually be duplicated by Ohio in the ceaseless fight for the best and decent civic and political conditions. Year by year the liquor traffic has been cut down in this county until today the wet leaders admit it has taken its stand permanently in the Prohibition column.

Ohio will pursue the same course. Time and education will produce the same result in the state as they have in this county. The temperance forces must have infinite tact and patience. Right is with them. Theirs is a labor of love. They can afford to wait, for in the fullness of time the prayers of the Crusaders will have been answered.

OCTOBER
By Walt Mason

In sad October Dame Nature's sober, the skies are bleak o'erhead, and winds seem sighing, "All things are dying, if not already dead." The frost lies hoary where late the glory of flowers was seen at morn; the rustic bumpkin brings home the pumpkin and shucks the yellow corn. The sun is hiding, save when, dividing, the clouds give him a chance to make a showing and do some glowing, and then we sing and dance. Now helters skelter the cows seek shelter, when cold night winds arise; the colts and fillies all have the willies, and run as for a prize. The flies are reeling along the ceiling, their labors nearly o'er, the wind is wailing, "The Autumn's failing, and Winter's at the door!" The Autumn's dwindling—just brought the kindling and other furnace food! Just bought the maple and other staple and standard brands of wood! It's late October; the earth will robe her ere long in snow and storm, and if we're heady, we'll all be ready, and have our wigwams warm.

AFTER HALLOWE'EN

I'll have to prop my reeling brain. I wonder if I'm entirely sane? Not is the wine cup do I look; my drink is from the babbling brook that courses by my humble home; it's long since I have blown the foam from brimming flagons at the bar, or pulled the cork from jug or jar. I go not where Bacchante sings, and yet, alas, I'm seeing things. Is that a cow in yonder tree, or have my eyes gone back on me? Since when did cows begin to perch in yonder elm beside the church? And there's a horse that makes me blink; its horn is blue, its tail is pink; when steeds chromatic drift along, I'm almost sure there's something wrong. Mark that old rooster on the fence—no feathers are in evidence. When Brahma roosters are as bare of plumage as a Bartlett pear, methinks the world is in the ditch; some warlock runs it, or a witch. I'll have to have an expert look for rule robes in that babbling brook. When water makes him see such freaks, some other drink the wise man seeks. These dire phantasms I must foil—I'll fill myself with linseed oil.

WHAT CAN'T ELSIE JANIS DO

After seeing her wonderful lariat dance with the cowboys in her new BOSWORTH incorporation, photo comedy, "NEARLY A LADY," this is the first question that arises.

Minstrel, singer, dancer, author, ELSIE JANIS is gifted with the ability to create, create any new part, sell and sell herself so the manager of it that she outdoes even those who have been at it for years.

In "NEARLY A LADY," the Montana cowboys, headed by Art Accord, the famous rider, demonstrate some of these bewildering dances with ELSIE JANIS looking on. When they are finished she quickly dons her riding skirt and uncomfortable riding breeches and boots and proceeds to do the lariat dance she has just seen. With toes tripping prettily in perfect time she dances inside the whirling rope which by means of her supple wrist, all the time describes a flying hoop around her like the loop of a cyclone. And the marvel of it is that her dance is far more expert than those of Art Accord and his boys, who are genuine cowboys, lived and brought up on ranch and range. "NEARLY A LADY," the third of the film comedies ELSIE JANIS has played for BOSWORTH Incorporated, is her favorite. Filled with action of a new kind and carrying a pretty love story it quite justifies her preference. At the Mystic today.

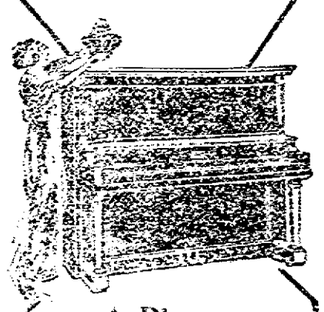
"The Quality Goes IN Before the Name Goes ON"



A Piano To Be Proud Of

No matter who calls—no matter how fine a musician—a Crown Piano is a piano to be proud of.

The Crown is not only beautiful in design, artistic in proportion and finely finished, but a high grade musical instrument in every respect.

It answers perfectly to every touch of practiced fingers, and to every mood of the artist musician in pleasing tones appreciated by all music lovers.

Crown Pianos

are the result of over 30 years of experience and research, and possess beauty of tone and responsiveness of action that are at once recognized by everyone.

In buying a piano, remember it is something you buy but once in a lifetime—a few payments more or less make little difference. The important thing is to get a good instrument, one that will be good for many years.

Send for our booklets which explain fully all about the Crown Piano and its manufacture, and also how you can buy one at a good saving. They are FREE for the asking. Mail the coupon TODAY.

Scientists discover the cause of bleeding gums and loose teeth

The old idea that bleeding gums and loose teeth (symptoms of pyorrhea) are due to little pieces of tartar or bone under the gums, has been exploded. Scientists have made the astounding discovery that this disease is caused by a germ which is found in every human mouth.

This germ is the most active and destructive enemy of your teeth. Are you protecting them against it? You can ward off its constant attack and escape the dread results of the disease by using the proper corrective and preventive treatment in your daily toilet.

To meet the need for this treatment and to enable everyone to take the necessary precautions against this disease, a prominent dentist has put his own prescription before the public in the convenient form of Senreco Tooth Paste.

Sample size

Senreco contains the best corrective and preventive for pyorrhea known to dental science. Used daily it will successfully protect your teeth from this disease. Senreco also contains the best harmless agent for keeping the teeth clean and white. It has a refreshing flavor and leaves a wholesomely clean, cool and pleasant taste in the mouth.

Start the Senreco treatment tonight—full details in the folder wrapped around every tube. Symptoms described. A 25c two oz. tube is sufficient for six or eight weeks of the pyorrhea treatment. Get Senreco at your druggists today, or send 4c in stamps or coin for sample tube and folder. Address The Sentanel Remedies Co., 596 Union Central Bldg., Cincinnati, Ohio.

SOCIETY NEWS
That Will be of Interest to Women

At Engel Home.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Engel of [illegible] 4, celebrated the [illegible] Sunday: Mr. and Mrs. Fred Reese, [illegible] Mr. and Mrs. Russel Wadling of Bloomfield, Misses Effa Engel, Eva Engel, Anna Getz, Messrs. Roy Harrison, Robert Getz, Charles Engel and Lloyd Snodgrass.

Blissfield Society.

The W. M. S. of the Blissfield Evang. Ref. church met at the home of Mrs. William Bower Thursday October 28. Mrs. Andrew Reiss was leader of the meeting and the program took place in the study of the lesson, "Red Man's Land," from which select readings were given by Mrs. Stevens, Mrs. Glyser, Mrs. McNeal and Mrs. Thorn. Members present were: Mrs. Lizzie Smalley, Mrs. Andrew Reiss, Mrs. Ella Myers, Mrs. R. A. Moore, Mrs. Emma McNeal, Mrs. Grace Myers, Mrs. Emma Williamson, Mrs. Dora Williamson, Mrs. Elizabeth Thorn, Mrs. Mary Fox, Mrs. Mary Myser, Mrs. Viola Bower, Mrs. Millie Seldoes, Miss Nettie Fox. Visitors were: Mrs. Mary Lowe, Mrs. Maude Lowers and Miss Inez Bower.

The next regular meeting will be held Thursday November 18, at the home of Mrs. Andrew Reiss. The society will render a Thanksgiving Rally Day program at the Evangelical church at Blissfield Sunday, November 14. A Thanksgiving offering will be taken.

Pie Social.

The Pike Ridge school will have a literary program for Thanksgiving and a pie social on Nov. 21. Ladies are asked to bring pies.

Club Hears Good Program.

The first regular meeting of the Women's Music club was held Tuesday evening at the home of the president, Mrs. Harry Kerlin, on Orchard street. The program was made up of a paper on, "American Operatic Stars," by Mrs. Joseph McCloy; a paper on, "Edgar Stillman Kelley," Miss Cozette Fisher; a piano solo, "Witches Dance," by McDowell, Miss Marguerite Haught; vocal solo, "Mavis," by Harold Crexton, Miss Helen LeRetilley and a vocal solo, "My Lovely Rose," by Cadman, Miss Ione Glass.

The next meeting of the club will be held December 7 with Mrs. Frank Ashman as hostess.

Mary Reeds Meet.

The Mary Reed Missionary society of Grace M. E. church will meet Friday evening at the home of Mrs. Lou Miller, corner John and Lind avenue.

Surprise at Conesville.

The members of the Q. O. T. N. club of Conesville planned and carried out a surprise for Mrs. Harry Talbot at her home one-half mile south of Conesville, Tuesday evening. After enjoying the evening with social games refreshments were served.

Suffrage Convention November 11.

Four hundred women are expected at the thirteenth annual convention of the Ohio Woman Suffrage party, which opens at the Hollenden hotel in Cleveland, Thursday, November 11.

Delegates to the convention will be confronted with the problem whether to make a campaign for equal suffrage in Ohio next fall.

It is not considered likely that the vote will be favorable for a referendum on the equal rights questions. The majority of Cleveland suffragists are not in favor of an election in 1916 because of the limited finances of the state party.

Mrs. E. L. Bassett and Mrs. Alta Gilbert, delegates of the Cleveland party, have been instructed to vote against an election next year.

While committees will meet and conferences will be held Thursday morning, the formal opening does not come until the afternoon. Mrs. Philip Snowden, London, Eng., English suffragist, not of militant, is to be a speaker at a luncheon which is to precede the formal call to order.

Thursday afternoon there will be reports from committee chairmen. That evening Miss Elizabeth J. Hauser, Girard, O., executive secretary of the state party, will lead an organization conference in which eighteen women from all sections of the state will participate.

Friday morning Miss Belle Sherwin, chairman of the executive committee; Mrs. Roger Perkins, chairman of the literature committee; Mrs. Deming, state treasurer, and Miss Mary Grahan, Rice, Norwalk, O., chairman of finance committee, will make their reports.

In the afternoon Miss Florence Allen, Cleveland, will offer resolutions and Mrs. Harriet Taylor Upton, Warren, O., president of the state party, will give her annual address.

The evening will be given over to unfinished business and to a fellowship canvass in charge of Mrs. Charles S. Brooks, chairman of the Woman Suffrage Party of Greater Cleveland.

NOTICE

All water rents due and unpaid for the period beginning Oct. 1, 1915 are now delinquent and the same will be turned off without further notice.

How To Get Rid of a Bad Cough

A Home-Made Remedy that Will Do It Quickly. Cheap and Easily Made

If you have a bad cough or chest cold which refuses to yield to ordinary remedies, get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth), pour into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Start taking a teaspoonful every hour or two. In 24 hours your cough will be conquered or very nearly so. Even whooping cough is greatly relieved in this way.

The above mixture makes a full pint—a family supply—of the finest cough syrup that money could buy—at a cost of only 54 cents. Easily prepared in 5 minutes. Full directions with Pinex.

This Pinex and Sugar Syrup preparation takes right hold of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the dry, hoarse or tight cough in a way that is really remarkable. Also quickly heals the inflamed membranes which accompany a raking cough, and stops the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes, thus ending the persistent loose cough. Excellent for bronchitis, spasmodic croup and winter coughs. Keeps perfectly and tastes good—children like it.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, rich in guaiacol, which is so healing to the membranes.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex"—do not accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Sulphur In New Zealand.

Sulphur deposits are found on White Island, in the bay of Plenty, on the coast of the North Island of New Zealand, about thirty miles from the mainland. This island, which covers about 600 acres, contains a lake of boiling water on one side and opens to the sea on the other. Its topography indicates an old crater, and the boiling lake on the island, which is one of the most striking sights of New Zealand, is a number evidence of volcanism. After the New Zealand Sulphur company had spent $[illegible] in preparation for mining sulphur in this locality a volcanic disturbance wrecked the camp and killed [illegible] men.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—Juanita Hilliard, a Hillsdale young woman of wealth, on her father's estate, meets Good Anse Taliaferro, head of the clan of the Cumberlands, to become a member of the mountain district, forms at the door of Fletch McNash's cabin. While resting there she overhears a talk between Bad Anse Havey, chief of his clan, and one of his followers that portends war with the Havey-McBriar feud.

CHAPTER II—Juanita has an unpleasable talk with Bad Anse and they become antagonists.

CHAPTER III—Cal Douglas of the Helton clan is on trial in Pearl for the murder of Noah Wade, a McBriar.

CHAPTER IV—In the night Juanita hears footsteps rate past the McNash cabin.

CHAPTER V—Juanita and Dawn McNash become friends.

CHAPTER VI—Cal Douglas is acquitted. Next morning perhaps to call him but is himself killed by the Haveys.

CHAPTER VII—Juanita goes to live with the Widow Everson, whose boys are outside the feud. Milt McBriar, head of his clan, meets Bad Anse there and declares in personality for Wade and attempt to aid Douglas. Turns down a truce, under pressure from Good Anse Talbott.

CHAPTER VIII—Juanita learns that Bad Anse is chief of the Haveys and forbids to buy land and build a home.

CHAPTER IX—Milt McBriar breaks the truce by having Fletch McNash shot and Jeb McNash begs Bad Anse to kill him and kill his father. Young Jeb and Juanita and Bad Anse further misunderstand each other.

CHAPTER X—Bad Anse is bitter but tells Juanita he does not fight women and will give her land if necessary.

"They will come." His voice again rose vehemently. "But they'll be made my way—our way, not yours. These hills sha'n't always be a reproach to the state of Kentucky. They're goin' to be her pride some day."

"That's all!" exclaimed the girl, flinging at him a glance of absolute admiration. "I don't care who does it, so long as it's done right. You've got to see sooner or later that we're working to the same end. You may not be my friend, but I'm going to be yours."

"I'm obleeged to ye." He spoke gravely and, turning on his heel left the room by the back door.

As chance would have it, Young Milt rode by her place the next day. She knew he would come back the same way, and that afternoon, as he was returning, she intercepted him beyond the turn of the road. With the foreign courtesy learned abroad, he lifted his hat and dismounted.

Juanita had always rather liked Young Milt. The clear fearlessness of his eyes gave him a certain attractiveness, and his face had so far escaped the clouding veil of sullenness which she so often saw.

At first she was a little confused as to how to approach the subject, and the boy rolled a cigarette as he stood respectfully waiting.

"Milt," she said at last, "please don't misunderstand me. It's not because I want to, but I've got to ask you to give me a promise. You see, I need your help."

At that the half smile left the boy's lips and a half frown came to his eyes.

"I reckon I know what ye mean," he said. "Young Jeb, he's asked ye ter warn me off. Why don't Jeb carry his own messages?"

"Milt," she gravely reminded him, resting her hand for a moment on his coatsleeve, "it's more serious than that. Jeb ordered me to send his sister back to the cabin. You are having an education. I want her to have one. She has the right to it. I love her very dearly, Milt, and if you are a friend you won't rob her of her chance."

The boy's eyes flashed.

"An' ye're goin' ter send her back thar ter dwell amongst them razorback hawgs an' hom'nacks an' fleas?" he demanded spiritedly.

"That depends on you. Jeb is the head of his family. I can't keep her without his consent. I had to promise him that you shouldn't visit her."

For a moment the heir to the McBriar leadership stood twisting the toe of his heavy boot in the dust and apparently contemplating the little rings it stamped out. Then he raised his eyes and contemplatively studied the crests of ridges softening with the coming of sunset.

At last he inquired: "What hes Dawn got ter say?"

"Dawn hasn't said much," Juanita faltered, remembering the girl's tirade, then she confessed. "You see, Milt, just now Dawn is thinking of herself as a Havey and of you as a McBriar. All I ask is that you won't try to see her while she's here at the school—not, at all events, until things are different."

The boy was wrestling with youth's unwillingness to be crossed.

"An' ye think that hev Dawn thank that hev brot'er sh'ot dead?" he questioned at last with a tone of rising defiance.

"Dawn shan't think that. She shall know that you have only acted like a gentleman's generosity, Milt, and he asks I've asked you to do it."

"Hain't I good enough ter keep company with Fletch McNash's gals?" The lad was already persuaded, but his stubbornness urged this, a long shot.

"It's not a question of that, Milt, and you know it," declared Juanita. "It's just that one of your people killed one of his. Put yourself in Jeb's place."

Still for a while the boy stood there scowling down at the ground, but at last he raised his face and nodded.

"It's a bargain, maam. Ye hand I only says I won't see her. Somehaw I'll make Jeb pay for it."

He mounted and rode away while the lazy, hazy sweetness of the smoke mists hung splendidly to the ridges and the sunset flamed at his back.

Juanita never knew what details of the incident came to old Milt's ears, but when next the head of the house passed her on the road he spoke with a diminished cordiality and when she stopped him he commented: "I hear ye're a-ridin' a Havey hoss over thar now. Little Milt tells me ye warned him offen yore place."

She tried to explain, and though he pretended to accept all she said in good humor, she knew in her heart she had made a powerful and bitter enemy.

One afternoon Anse Havey, wandering through the timber on his own side of the ridge, came upon a lone hunter, and when he drew near it proved to be young Milt McBriar.

"Mornin', Milt," said Havey. "I didn't know ye ever went hunting over here."

The boy, who in feud etiquette was a trespasser, met the scrutiny with a level glance.

"I was a-gunnin' for boomers," he said, using the local phrase for red squirrels of the hills. "I reckon I hain't hardly got no license ter go gunnin' on yore land."

Anse Havey sat down on a log and looked up at the boy steadily. At last he said gravely:

"Hunt as much as ye like, Milt, only be heedful not to start no fires."

Milt nodded and turned to go, but the elder man called him back.

"I want to have a word with ye, Milt," he said soberly. "I ain't never heard that neither the McBriars nor the Haveys countenanced settin' fire to dwellin'-houses, have you?"

"I don't know what ye means," responded the boy, and the gaze that passed between them was that of two men who can look direct into any eye.

"I 'lowed it would astonish ye," went on Anse. "Back of the new schoolhouse that's still full of shavin's an' loose timber there's a little stretch of dry woods that comes right down to the back door. Somebody has done laid a trail of shavin's an' leaves in the brush there an' soaked 'em with coal-oil. Some feller aims to burn down that schoolhouse tonight."

"Did ye tell Miss Holland?" demanded Milt in a voice of deep anxiety.

"No, I ain't named it to her." Bad Anse said with seeming indifference in his face, at which the lad's blood boiled.

"Does ye aim ter set hyar an' let her place git burnt up?" he snapped out wrathfully. "Because if ye does, I don't."

Anse Havey laughed.

"Well, no," he replied; "I didn't aim to do that."

Suddenly he rose.

"What I did aim to do, Milt, was this: I aimed to sit down there tonight with enough fellers to handle either the fire or whoever starts it. I aimed to see who was goin' in a trick like that. Will you go along, me?"

"Me?" echoed Milt in astonishment. This idea of the two factions acting in concert was a mad innovation. It might be a trap. Suddenly the boy demanded: "Why don't ye ask pap?"

"I don't ask your pap nothing." In Havey's reply was a quick and truculent snap that rarely came into his voice. "I'm ast'in' you, an' you can take my proposition or leave it. That house burns yo's goin' to die. It hes one of my people lives in it to know it. If hes one of your people you ought to feel the same. Will you go with me?"

The boy [illegible] the proposal for [illegible] Dawn would be in danger. At last he said gravely:

"Put it on the ground a fair proposition. I'll go along, an' meanwhile I'll keep my own counsel."

was only strategy and was totally insincere. Yet in Young Milt he saw possibilities. He was accustomed to rely on his own judgment, and he recognized a clean and sterling strain in the younger McBriar.

He hated the breed with a hatred that was flesh of his flesh and bone of his bone, but with an eye of prophecy he foresaw the day when a disrupted mountain community must fall asunder unless native sons could unite against the conquest of lowland greed. He could never trust Old Milt, but he felt that he and Young Milt, who would some day succeed to his father's authority, might stand together in that inevitable crisis.

This idea had for a long time been vaguely taking shape in his mind, and when he met Young Milt in the woods and proposed uniting to save Juanita's school he was laying the cornerstone of that future edifice.

At sunset Young Milt came, and he came without having spoken of his purpose at home. The night was sharp and moonless, with no light save that which came from the coldly glittering stars, and Anse and Young Milt crouched for hours, knee to knee in the dead thickets, keeping watch.

At last they both saw a creeping figure which was only a vague shadow moving among shadows, and they peered with straining eyes and raised rifles. But the shadow fell very still, and since it was only by its movement that they could detect it, they waited in vain.

What kind of being watched was given not no one could say. The woods were quiet, and the two kneeling figures in the laurel made no sound. The other men, waiting at their separated posts, were equally invisible and noiseless, but some intangible premonition had come to the shadow which had lost itself in the ruins of the black-[illegible] ness and [illegible] not more pleased.

Young Anse went back to his house in the cold mists of dawn. No shot had been fired, no face recognized, but the Havey and the McBriar both knew that the school had been saved by their joint vigilance.

Some days later the news of that night watch leaked through to Jerry Everson, who bore the tidings to Juanita, and she wrote a note to Anse Havey asking him to come over and let her express her thanks in person.

The mail rider brought her a brief reply penned in a hand of copybook care.

I don't take any credit. I only did what any other man would do, and young Mr. McBriar did as much as I did. Thank him if you want to. It would be awkward for me to come over there.

Respectfully, ANSE HAVEY.

Old Milt McBriar heard of his son's part in the watching of the school and brooded blackly as he gnawed at the stem of his pipe, but he said nothing. The boy had been sent away to college and had had every advantage. Now he had unwittingly bar none the loss [illegible] strongly turned his face on and to the [illegible] brethren's best or his father's work, for the old school building had been laid at Old Milt's command.

The thing did not tend to make the leader of the McBriars partial to the innovations from down below.

One day, when Juanita went down to the post office, which nested modestly behind the saddle count [illegible] the black store at the cross, she found a letter directed in a hand which set her heart beating and revived many old memories.

She climbed to the crest, sat down under the poplar, and began to read the letter from the man she had sent away.
